Guest speaker: Helen Walsh SPS RULER Coordinator

Topic: Helping Students Manage Emotions Post-Election, and Everyday

- RULER was developed by Yale University’s Center for Emotional Intelligence.
- The goal of RULER is help students decode emotions as they occur and develop emotional intelligence.
- One RULER tool is the Mood Meter, which is featured in Arbor Heights classrooms and lets students label how they are feeling by identifying their levels of energy and pleasantness.
- Feelings affect attention: emotionally intelligent kids have more leadership abilities.
- Arbor Heights classrooms have their own charters—students’ familiar could create their own charter.
- RULER anchor tools include:

- Charter
- Mood meter
- Meta-moment: Take a deep breath, picture your best self, identify strategies (how to respond effectively) to succeed.
- Blueprint: An opportunity to build empathy. when there was a conflict, how did I feel, how did I regulate, then go through the same process with the other person.
- Characters (and their respective dispositions) from Winnie the Pooh can help identify the four colors of the Mood Meter:
 - Yellow: Tigger
 - Green: Piglet
 - Blue: Eeyore
 - Red: Rabbit
- What can parents do?
 - Start labeling emotions
 - Create word walls: all words for each of the mood meter stages
 - Use literature
 - Create a strategy wall
 - Think about things you can do to regulate emotions
 - Model strategies
